Let's Start!

Cookies? Cakes? Pies? Let's visit the bakery!

Learning Outcome

Relate information about health and healthy habits in communicative situations.

With your partner:

- What can you buy at the bakery?
- What questions do you ask at the bakery?

Can Do Statements

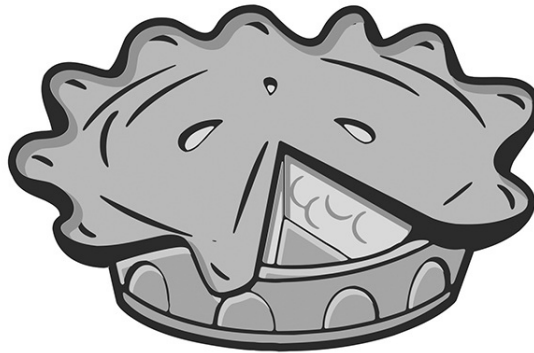

- I can use one and ones.
- I can ask and give suggestions.
- I can ask who, what, when, where questions.

Let's Explore!

Let's buy a pie with Vanessa and Aunt Nelly. What kind should they buy?

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Aunt Nelly: I'm craving pie. Let's check out the bakery on the way home.
Clerk: Welcome to Sara's Sweets. What can I get you today?
Aunt Nelly: We'd like a pie.
Clerk: Fantastic choice. What kind?
Vanessa: Which ones do you have? When do you bake them?
Clerk: They are baked fresh every morning. We have apple, cherry, pumpkin.
Aunt Nelly: What kind is this one?
Vanessa: Who bakes the pies?
Clerk: That's peach, ma'am. I bake them.
Vanessa: I want to learn how to bake a pie.
Clerk: Would you like to attend one of our classes?
Vanessa: Of course! Oh, look at this one!
Aunt Nelly: Which one?
Vanessa: The strawberry-rhubarb pie! What about those ones?
Clerk: Chocolate cream pies are our best seller.
Aunt Nelly: That sounds divine!
Vanessa: How about something light? Any suggestions?
Clerk: You should get the lemon meringue pie.
Aunt Nelly: Great suggestion! Can we get one of those?

Let's Practice!

Let's ask questions at the bakery!

Learning Points

Pronouns One vs. Ones

You can use the pronouns one (singular) and ones (plural) to replace nouns. You often use demonstratives (this, that, these, those) with one and ones.

Example:

There are two pies. I like this one. It's an apple pie.

You can also use them after Which in questions.

Example:

Which one? or Which ones?

Examples:

- I have a blue pen and a red pen. Which one do you want?
- I have a pair of blue shoes, and a pair of red shoes. Which ones do you want?
